Pat's Little Rant

Patrick Maher, Miyazaki Prefecture CIR

I'm not a morning person; I'm quite vampire-like in my relationship with the sun. Nonetheless, morning proves best for exercise, so I'm a morning jogger, which offers ample opportunities to observe Morning Folk. I like Morning Folk. I like the man who bikes around with a chicken in his basket. I like the old woman in the mini-sombrero who heartily says her hellos. Morning Folk are good people; however, I've made a statistical discovery regarding morning dog-walkers: the number of dogs with an individual is proportional to the individual's level of disdain for humanity. A person walking one dog will smile, exchange greetings, and smell of optimism. A person with two dogs looks downtrodden and refuses to move for oncoming bicyclists. A person with three dogs never returns my "good morning!" and feigns ignorance when his little spawn of Cerberus bites me on the leg last Monday!...Most likely he retires afterward to a hidden lair inhabited by canine demigods to contemplate how to ruin someone else's morning. An early morning canine limit must be enforced: 2 or less. Feel free to arrest anyone who refuses to follow suit.
